

Conference on HR management concludes

Mysuru: Human resource management needs to emphasize on revolutionary, transitional and transformational change, said Richard Lobo, senior vice-president and head of HR, Infosys, here on Friday. In his keynote address at the inaugural function of the 4th International Conference on Managing Human Resources At Workplace, at SDMIMD campus, he spoke about challenges such as disruptive technology and innovation. He stressed on the challenges of managing the millennial workforce and role of private networks in managing people.

NR Parasuraman, director SDMIMD, emphasized on the need for effective human resource management in organizations.

The two-day conference had various lectures and panel discussion with eminent corporate leaders and academic speakers. The conference was attended by nearly 250 academic scholars and HR practitioners from not only across the country, but also from foreign countries, including Bangladesh, Iran, Maldives, Nigeria, Sri Lanka, UAE, and US. The conference is expected to create a forum to discuss and deliberate on contemporary HR topics, such as human capital management, emotional intelligence, HR and sustainability, Green HRM, HR Analytics, and competency mapping.
