Mysore: An expert in international business on Monday argued for economic reforms, which, he said, if stalled, will be perilous.

Julian Gasper, director of Centre for International Business Studies (Texas), argued the case of economic reforms. "India might be in danger if it goes back on the economic front," he said. "Nations which do not take the advantage of globalization and free trade will suffer," Gasper, who is also clinical professor of finance at the Mays Business School, said at an international symposium organized by SDM Institute for Management Development.

Arun Nayar, a leading HR professional who is currently the director HR at Safran Engineering Services, spoke on the importance of cultural adaptability for a successful working professional.
